M° Assemblée nationale (12), Invalides (8, 13)
01 40 63 57 72 – www.assemblee-nationale.fr

The buildings of the National Assembly include the Palais Bourbon, where the Chamber of Deputies is seated since 1798 and the Hôtel de Lassay, residence of the President of the Assembly. They were built simultaneously from 1724 by Jacques V Gabriel, the King's chief architect and Jean Aubert, architect of the Bourbon-Condé family. The two hotels became property of the Nation in 1792. Their current appearance is essentially the result of changes made by Jules Joly from 1828 : session hall, courtyard facade, library and living room painted by Delacroix (1833-1838), etc.

Visit of the Hôtel de Lassay and of the Palais Bourbon

Saturday and Sunday 9:00-18:00
